

Cartoons for the Classroom

Presented by NIEonline.com and the Association of American Editorial Cartoonists (AAEC)

By Joe Heller, Green Bay Press-Gazette / Courtesy of AAEC

Drawing a different message from news

Between the lines

"How he survived, I don't know.
The air is pretty thin up there."
- Tom Simon, FBI spokesman.

http://www.latimes.com/local/lanow/la-me-ln-teen-jet-stowaway-managed-to-breach-airport-security-measures-20140421_0_1565622.full_story

Additional resources

More by Joe Heller

<http://editorialcartoonists.com/cartoon/browse.cfm/HelleJ>

Association of American
Editorial Cartoonists
<http://editorialcartoonists.com/>

Talking Points

1. Cartoonist Joe Heller takes a recent news report about a teenager stowing away in the wheel well of a jet airliner to make a comment about which completely different issue?
2. Can you see a link between the news item and Heller's message? Is it an effective way to make a comment? Why or why not?
3. Just what is happening to America's middle class incomes and families?
4. Other cartoonists used this same news report to comment about which issues?