Presented by NIEonline.com and the Association of American Editorial Cartoonists (AAEC)

Distant trouble becomes nearby 'crisis'

Talking points

1. What is Nick Anderson's cartoon saying about how we see threatening situations?
2. Randy Bish drew his cartoon before Ebola was diagnosed in the U.S. Do you think we now are more frightened of Ebola than terrorists in the Mideast?
3. African villagers fought off doctors and nurses they feared were spreading Ebola. Are we reacting similarly with health worker quarantines?
4. Could new quarantines discourage doctors and nurses from fighting Ebola?

Between the lines

"The U.S. cannot allow Ebola infected people back. People that go to far away places to help out are great-but must suffer the consequences!" - Donald Trump
